

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor,

Last week, I read your editorial on summer vacation. You suggested that young people should go to school all summer instead of enjoying a long break.

I am a fifth-grade student who loves my summer vacation. I know some people do not use their summers wisely, but the rest of us should not suffer because of that. I travel during the summer with my family. It is the only time we can take trips and spend a lot of time together. I also go to summer camp for several weeks. I learn to canoe and rock climb—things I could never do at my own home.

It's true that some people should spend their summers differently. But that doesn't mean summer should be ruined for the rest of us.
