

Bandit and Barkley

I have two dogs, Bandit and Barkley. There is one big difference between them. Bandit is small enough to crawl under my bed and hide when he gets into trouble, but Barkley is so big that he can't even fit under the kitchen table.

My dogs may be different sizes, but they are alike in many ways. They both have big brown eyes and soft white fur on their underbellies. Each dog also has a short tail that thumps on the floor whenever someone walks into the room.

Bandit likes to sleep on a chair in my room, but Barkley sleeps on the floor in my sister's room. My sister and I take them both for a walk every morning. Bandit is always running ahead of us, unlike Barkley, who lags behind, sniffing and exploring everything along the way.
